Broadway icon Lin-Manuel Miranda may be a New Yorker, but when he was a kid he'd often visit his grandparents in Puerto Rico. Now, after Hurricane Maria devastated the island, Miranda's back there, working towards its repair. Metro Puerto Rico caught up with the "Hamilton" star, who is putting his creative endeavors on hold while he helps raise money for Puerto Rico's recovery. See what he has planned, inside and at Metro.us.

MOORE HIT WITH SEXUAL MISCONDUCT ALLEGATIONS

I A woman has accused Roy Moore, the Republican nominee in Alabama for the U.S. Senate, of initiating a sexual encounter with her when she was 14 years old, the Washington Post reported, prompting the Republican Senate leader to call on Moore to step aside if the story turns out to be true. Moore, the state's former chief judge who was a 32-year-old Alabama prosecutor at the time and is now 70, vehemently denied the allegations, calling them "completely false and a desperate political attack." "This garbage is the very definition of fake news and intentional defamation," his campaign added in the same statement. Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell called on Moore to drop out of the race "if these allegations are true," and several other Republicans echoed that sentiment.

LOUIS C.K. ACCUSED OF SEXUAL HARASSMENT

2 Louis C.K. sexually harassed several women years ago by masturbating in front of them against their wills, according to a report by the New York Times published Thursday afternoon. Five female comedians went on record in the report and detailed multiple instances of alleged sexual misconduct by the award-winning comedian and actor. Shortly before the report broke, Louis C.K.'s New York film premiere for "I Love You, Daddy" was abruptly canceled, according to the Hollywood Reporter. Louis C.K.'s planned appearance on CBS' "The Late Show With Stephen Colbert" Thursday night was also canceled. For more, see page 11

AT&T ARMED FOR FIGHT ON TIME WARNER DEAL

4 AT&T Inc will not sell cable network CNN to win antitrust approval of its proposed $85.4 billion purchase of media company Time Warner Inc and will fight the government in court if the two sides cannot reach an agreement, the wireless company's chief executive said. Justice Department staff have recommended that AT&T sell either its DirecTV unit or Time Warner's Turner Broadcasting unit, which includes news company CNN, a government official told Reuters, on the grounds that a combined company would raise costs for rival entertainment distributors and stifle innovation. The two sides are still in talks over approval of the deal but have disagreed over the necessity of asset sales. "If we feel like litigation is a better outcome then we will litigate," AT&T CEO Randall Stephenson told the New York Times DealBook conference.

FACEBOOK TO TRAIN AFTER RUSSIA SCANDAL

5 Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg is kicking off an effort to get U.S. small businesses to spend more on advertising as the image of the social media network's ads have taken a hit for their role in the alleged Russian attempts to sway U.S. voters. Facebook will dispatch teams to 30 U.S. cities next year to run free training classes about its advertising, the company said in a statement.

Facebook disclosed in September that Russians bought ads on its platform in an attempt to divide Americans in the run-up to the 2016 U.S. presidential election. The Russian government has denied meddling in the election. The company has responded by pledging to root out fake accounts and build a publicly searchable archive of ads related to elections, among other steps.

Drift in space without leaving Earth inside Let's Survive Forever by Yayoi Kusama. ALL PHOTOS COURTESY DAVID ZWIRNER

Step inside an infinite world

Be prepared to wait up to four hours to step inside Yayoi Kusama's mirrored marvels.

EVA KIS
eva.kis@metro.us

Your selfie game better be on point before coming to the Infinity Mirror Rooms of Yayoi Kusama.

After a sold-out run in Los Angeles, the Japanese artist's endless landscapes have arrived in Chelsea at David Zwirner gallery (525 and 533 W. 19th St.) for a free run, open now through Dec. 16.

The main attraction, Let's Survive Forever, is a galaxy right here on Earth. Every wall and column is covered in mirrors endlessly reflecting silver spheres placed around the room, creating the appearance of floating among the stars.

In the second room, Longing for Eternity, visitors stick their heads inside a hexagonal box filled with lightbulbs whose colors change, a life-size kaleidoscope.

On display for the first time in the U.S., a third room called With All My Love for the Tulips, I Pray Forever contains three giant flowers, with everything from floor to ceiling painted white with red polka dots. Go ahead, tell your friends you took a tumble into Wonderland. You've got proof.

Sounds amazing, right? Well, you're going to have to work for that selfie.

The gallery is estimating wait times of between two and four hours to enter the two mirror rooms — that's outside, by the way.

Each group of six people will be allowed to spend only one minute inside Let's Survive Forever, and only 30 seconds in Longing for Eternity, which can only accommodate three at a time. Absolutely no selfie sticks or flash is allowed.

There's a separate entrance for With All My Love For The Tulips, I Pray Forever, and while there's no time limit, you'll be asked to keep it moving once 10 people are in the room.

Accompanying the rooms are 66 of Kusama's My Eternal Soul paintings, which you can also see without waiting in line. Entry to all of the exhibits is free; gallery hours are Tuesdays through Saturdays (except Thanksgiving) from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Kusama has been making art since the 1950s, spanning visual pieces, installations, literature, performance, fashion and architecture.

At 88 years old, she continues to produce some of the most beloved art exhibits today, well beyond the Infinity Rooms — perhaps because she's never lost the sense of childlike wonder we're all taught to grow out of.

"In my more than 70 years as an artist, I have always been in awe of the wonder of life," she writes in her artist statement.

"More than anything, this strong sense of the life force in artistic expression is what has supported me and gave me the power to overcome feelings of depression, hopelessness and sadness. I have been guided by my belief in this power."

So set aside the deep analysis and mental gymnastics that modern art requires for a weekend and just enjoy being in Kusama's infinite moment.

With All My Love for the Tulips, I Pray Forever

Lin-Manuel Miranda is back, reloaded with help

"I have a couple of things, shows and songs, but everything is on hold," the "Hamilton" artist told Metro.

LYNET SANTIAGO TUA
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

"Hamilton" star Lin-Manuel Miranda said all of his musical projects are on hold to devote himself completely to helping in the reconstruction of Puerto Rico after Hurricane Maria devastated the island.

"I have a couple of things, shows and songs, but everything is on hold," said Miranda, who is of Puerto Rican origin, at a news conference announcing the Federation of Hispanics delivery of $100,000 to seven local nonprofit organizations to continue with their social missions.

Miranda said although he is scheduled to continue writing other musical works and songs, during his vacation — which coincided with Hurricane Maria hitting Puerto Rico — he composed the song "Almost Like Praying" to raise funds to rebuild the island. It has been downloaded more than 100,000 times.

"We are in the moment of reconstruction; we have received money from all over the United States and even from more than 30 countries. The effort has been incredible. I know that sometimes here on the island people feel lonely, but they are not alone. A lot of people worldwide are supporting them," Miranda said.

He explained that part of the economic efforts come from digital downloads.

"I'm going to keep shouting; our job is to put Puerto Rico in everyone's conversations. I came now, and a month later we're going to continue talking about Puerto Rico. And that's the job for the future," he said.

He said he wrote "Almost Like Praying" the day after the passage of Hurricane Maria, in order to include the 78 municipalities of Puerto Rico that are represented by prominent artists including Jennifer López, Marc Anthony, Luis Fonsi, Juan Luis Guerra, Gilberto Santa Rosa and Tommy Torres.

"I felt that the title of the song was very appropriate, because when a tragedy happens, 'thoughts and prayers' are not enough," said Miranda, recalling the messages he read on the social networks of Puerto Ricans in the U.S. asking about their relatives on the island with whom they had no communication.

"In that silence, everyone wanted to do something. I went to Miami, Los Angeles and New York to record — all that money goes directly to Puerto Rico," said Miranda, who included in the song a piece of the award-winning film "West Side Story."

Miranda also announced that March 19 he will participate in a march on Washington D.C., from the Capitol to the Jefferson Memorial. At least 5,000 Puerto Ricans are expected.

The seven nonprofit organizations that will receive the aid of $100,000 are Beta Local, the Centro de Microempresas y Tecnologías Agrícolas de Yauco, Sor Isolina Ferré Centers, the project Enlace Caño Martín Peña, Para La Naturaleza and the program Programa de Educación Comunal de Entrega y Servicio y Proyectores de Cuencas.

The award-winning composer and lyri-cist will take his hit show "Hamilton: An American Musical" to the University of Puerto Rico's campus in San Juan for a limited three-week run in January 2019.

Returning vets natural fit for construction, development jobs

WRITTEN BY
Amy Smith

SKANSKA

The nation's deteriorating infrastructure continues to make headlines, but the news comes with one bright spot—a tremendous amount of potential work for construction and development companies. A shortage of skilled labor in the industry, however, is creating staffing challenges for these badly needed projects.

But there could be an untapped labor force staring the industry in the face: military veterans.

Roughly 200,000 military personnel transition into the civilian workforce each year, with the veteran population expected to increase 46 percent by 2019. Ingrained in veterans are skill sets and values that seamlessly transfer over to the construction jobsite.

The high focus on teamwork and safety, which is critical for success and longevity, is a natural fit for returning vets. At Skanska, the global construction and development firm, military veterans have greatly contributed to the successes of the business. In fact, this year, Skanska launched a military recruitment campaign to bring in top talent from this labor pool.

Veterans especially shine in the construction and development industry for a number of reasons:

- They work well in a team: Veterans are goal-oriented and trained to look out for the safety of others.

- They have a heightened sense of duty: Veterans understand that the whole is only as strong as its individual parts. As such, they strive to do their best for their country and fellow team members.

- They're organized and self-disciplined: Military vets are taught how to maintain order and a physical space that results in a keen attention to detail.

- They exhibit in-demand skills: Veterans often acquire advanced skills with computers, software and technology, heavy equipment, and tools common to many construction and development jobs.

- They're great problem solvers: While in the field, veterans are constantly challenged to come up with creative, and sometimes crucial, solutions to seemingly unsolvable problems – on the spot.

Veterans want jobs and the industry needs talented people to join the field on the jobsites and in the offices. Why not tap into this labor pool, rich with these leadership skills, and teach them the trade?

While serving our country, these individuals developed skills and habits that make them strong assets to our workforce. It's vital that we recognize their work and commitment, while honoring and respecting all they do to afford us the freedoms we have today.

To learn more about veterans working at Skanska, visit www.usa.skanska.com/veterans.

"The biggest similarity is the sense of immediacy; important things must be done in an efficient and correct way. I worked with a diverse team in the Navy that I relied on for support, and now I receive the same type of support at Skanska. Working in the Navy also taught me how to effectively work under pressure by teaching me tools to manage stress and turn it into something productive. This has been invaluable in my current position because I deal with critical deadlines."

- Juniel Spruiel

"Similar to the military, you have to be courageous with what we stand up for, and working safely in construction is pretty courageous."

- Jarrett Milligan

An active-shooter training video was developed by the NYPD after the mass shooting at the Pulse nightclub in Orlando, Florida. GETTY IMAGES

City nightlife industry uses NYPD training to arm itself against active-shooter situations

The "Safe Night Out" training video created for the NYC Hospitality Alliance stems from the 2016 Pulse nightclub shooting in Orlando, Florida.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
@MetroNewYork
nikki.mascali@metro.us

New York City's restaurants, bars and clubs adhere to many strict guidelines to keep patrons safe, from food safety to health and building inspections and now, for some, what to do in an active-shooter situation.

A "Safe Night Out" training video was developed by the NYPD for the NYC Hospitality Alliance, which has 2,000 member establishments across the five boroughs, after the mass shooting at the Pulse nightclub in Orlando, Florida, in June 2016. It was released on Monday, the day after 26 parishioners were gunned down in a Texas church and five weeks after 58 people were fatally shot at a country music festival in Las Vegas.

"I think Orlando really hit everyone upside the head and caused a lot of concern, especially when you have a mass gathering of people there with their guards down to enjoy themselves," said Paul Seres, a principal at The DL on the Lower East Side and Alliance board member.

While the NYPD has active-shooter training for schools and workplaces, there wasn't something specific for the hospitality industry, Inspector Thomas Conforti of the Crime Prevention Bureau said.

"Even though a tactical response is generally the same in the sense of the initiative of what has to get accomplished in one of these tragic instances, the environment and atmosphere is substantially different, especially in nightlife with huge crowds and dimly lit conditions," he added. "We thought it would be important to focus on that industry."

The training mirrors that for schools and offices but is "more specific in how we can be really preventive," Conforti said. "A lot of that has to do with being hyper-sensitive to observations that employees can make and make determinations on."

The active-shooter training includes developing and implementing action plans and protocols for each establishment's employees.

"Ultimately, they're the ones there before the police and first responders get to the location; they're the ones that are going to have to initiate the response to it," Conforti said.

Though two of the deadliest mass shootings in U.S. history occurred within the past two months, they've been a threat for "the last 10 years or so," Conforti said. "The reality is we want people to go out and enjoy themselves and continue living life the way it is, but just always be cognizant that if something would happen, how would you leave? What's the closest exit? Unfortunately, I think with all the recent events, many people do that automatically."

Andrew Rigue, executive director of the NYC Hospitality Alliance, agrees.

"People need to go to work, live their life, go out to eat and drink and enjoy themselves, but as New Yorkers, we also have to have an elevated consciousness of our surroundings," he said. "By providing this training on an ongoing basis, it reinforces a basis of that."

Rand Paul was injured in an alleged dispute with his neighbor. GETTY IMAGES

THE CURIOUS CASE OF RAND PAUL

Among the many bewildering puzzles in D.C. these days, this may be the best: Why did Rand Paul's neighbor allegedly tackle him? The Republican senator from Kentucky was dropped on his lawn like a sack of hammers in a mysterious dispute.

We know who allegedly took him down: one Rene Boucher, who has lived next door for years. (Pronounce his name as if you are chewing croissants and sipping chardonnay by the Tuileries — your friends will be très impressed! Ruh-nay BOO-shay.) We know the result: According to the police report, Paul suffered cuts on his face, and according to the senator's Twitter feed, "six broken ribs &...a pleural effusion." (I had an old Chevy with a pleural effusion; it pulled to the left and the lights flickered.) And we know Monsieur Boucher has pled not guilty to a misdemeanor assault charge related to the incident, although other more serious charges may

What we still don't know is why this happened. The take from the senator and his team is that it was "a blind-side, violent attack by a disturbed person." They keep winking at the idea Boucher was virulently anti-Trump/anti-Republican, and when he saw Sen. Paul cruising his yard on a riding mower, something snapped. Mind you, they are not specifically saying this — just strongly implying it.

An attorney for Boucher, meanwhile, is saying it had nothing to do with politics and was "a very regrettable dispute between two neighbors over a matter that most people would regard as trivial." I have no idea what that means. Maybe it was a disagreement over how well pasta should be cooked, or whether anyone can beat Alabama this season, or if "Modern Family" is still funny or just tedious. Who knows?

But the bigger mystery remains — a U.S. senator was pretty seriously roughed up outside his own home, and for some strange reason, neither he nor the other guy supposedly involved seems willing to step up and say precisely what it was about. Until they do, I'm going to say it was Colonel Mustard in the kitchen with the wrench. And don't ask me any questions. Like everyone else, apparently, I have a right to remain silent.

TAXES

Senate Republicans debut tax plan, House panel passes its version

U.S. Senate Republicans unveiled a tax plan on Thursday that differed from legislation in the House of Representatives on several fronts, including how they treat the corporate tax rate, the tax deduction for state and local taxes and the estate tax.

Complicating a Republican push for the biggest overhaul of U.S. tax law since the 1980s, senators said that, like the House, they wanted to slash the corporate tax rate to 20 percent from 35 percent, but in 2019, not right away.

As President Donald Trump toured Asia, Republicans reiterated their goal of enacting final legislation by the end of the year. If that happens, it would be Trump's first major legislative accomplishment.

Broadly, the House and Senate plans matched up in calling for deep tax cuts for high-earners and businesses and for a dramatic reshaping of how the United States taxes multinational corporations, winners if the plans become law.

Democrats, largely ignored in the closed-door drafting of both bills, have condemned them as giveaways to the rich and businesses that will do little for ordinary Americans.

The House was set to vote on its bill next week, following the measure's approval by the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee, in a party-line vote with Democrats united in opposition.

The Senate's timetable was less clear, with a formal bill yet to be drafted in that chamber, where Republicans have a much smaller majority and a narrower path to winning approval for any legislation, let alone one as contentious as a tax package. REUTERS

New York City agencies are investigating the death of a three-year-old boy who was given food he was allergic to while at his pre-kindergarten in Harlem.

Elijah Silvera was a preschool student at the Seventh Avenue Center for Family Services, which has since been shut down by city officials as the fatal mistake is being investigated, according to CBS2.

A friend of Elijah's family created a GoFundMe page in order to raise money for his funeral and memorial expenses as well as to help support his family as they take time off work and mourn the toddler's death.

According to that page, Elijah had been given a grilled cheese sandwich by an adult at the pre-k facility, "despite them knowing and having documented that he has a severe allergy to dairy."

Elijah went into anaphylactic shock, according to the GoFundMe, and was taken to the pediatric emergency room at Harlem Hospital, where he died.

The GoFundMe is also seeking money to cover an independent autopsy because "at this moment, it is unclear where responsibility for Elijah's death will fall between the pre-k and the hospital itself," according to the page. Elijah's family and friends want to find out exactly what happened to cause his death and say a third-party examination will ensure a full picture.

Still, Elijah's death was preventable, his family and friends say. They're urging more to be done to protect children who have life-threatening allergies while they are in schools.

It's estimated that 5.9 million children under the age of 18 have food allergies, according to the Food Allergy Research and Education, which equals one in 13 children, or about two in every classroom.

The New York City Health Department is investigating the incident, the city's Administration for Children's Services confirmed.

"There is nothing more important than the safety of our children and we are deeply saddened by this tragedy. We will get to the bottom of what happened here," the department said in a statement, according to ABC7. "In the meantime, we're closing the Center for Family Services and continuing to aggressively investigate what happened and whether the facility could have done something differently to prevent this tragedy."

Elijah leaves behind a "heartbroken mother, Dina, father, Thomas, and his 5-year-old brother Sebastian, as well as dozens of friends and family members who all mourn the loss of his precious young life," according to the GoFundMe.

Consumers sign up for Obamacare 2018 individual plans despite uncertainty

Consumer sign-ups for Obamacare individual insurance plans were more than 600,000 during the first week of enrollment for 2018, a U.S. health agency said on Thursday, a positive sign for insurers who take part in the healthcare program that Republicans want to undo.

The Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, a division of the Department of Health and Human Services, said that during the period of Nov. 1 through Nov. 4, 601,462 people, including 137,322 new consumers, selected plans in the 39 states that use the federal website HealthCare.gov.

That represents a daily average of 150,366 sign-ups.

Lori Lodes, a former HHS official who co-founded the enrollment group Get America Covered, said that during the year-ago period's first 12 days, the daily average for sign-ups was 84,018.

The sign-ups were seen as a positive indication of 2018 enrollment despite President Donald Trump's cut to Obamacare advertising of $90 million and his decision to suspend cost-sharing subsidy payments to insurers.

Five women have accused Louis CK of sexual misconduct

The comedians alleged that Louis C.K. masturbated in front of them.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU
@metromorgan
morgan@metro.us

Louis C.K. sexually harassed several women years ago by masturbating in front of them against their will, according to a report by the New York Times published Thursday afternoon.

Five female comedians went on record in the report and detailed multiple instances of alleged sexual misconduct by the award-winning comedian and actor.

Shortly before the report broke, Louis C.K.'s New York film premiere for "I Love You, Daddy" was abruptly canceled, according to the Hollywood Reporter. Louis C.K.'s planned appearance on CBS' "The Late Show With Stephen Colbert" was also canceled Thursday night.

One of the instances of misconduct allegedly happened at a Colorado comedy festival in 2002, according to comedian Dana Min Goodman, when Louis C.K. asked her and another female comedian, Julia Wolov, if he could take his penis out during a visit to his

Louis C.K. masturbated in front of several women without their consent, according to a new report. GETTY IMAGES

"He proceeded to take all of his clothes off, and get completely naked, and start masturbating."

Dana Min Goodman, to the Times

Aspen hotel room. The women initially laughed it off.

"And he really did it," Goodman said in the Times story. "He proceeded to take all of his clothes off, and get completely naked, and start masturbating."

Another woman, Abby Schachner, said she had an experience in 2003 in which she could hear Louis C.K. masturbating while on the phone with her. Comedian Rebecca Corry also told the Times that Louis C.K. asked if he could masturbate in front of her in 2005, when the pair were working together on a television pilot. Corry declined, reminding the comedian that he had a daughter and pregnant wife at home.

A fifth woman, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said Louis C.K. repeatedly asked that she watch him masturbate while she was worked behind the scenes on "The Chris Rock Show" in the late 1990s. She said she went along with his request.

It's not the first time the subject of Louis C.K. masturbating in front of women has been brought up - rumors about him being sexually inappropriate with colleagues have swirled for years - but it is the first time women have gone on record about the misconduct.

In a request for an interview Tuesday, Louis C.K.'s publicist told the Times, "Louis is not going to answer any questions."

Twitter reacts to Louis CK's sexual harassment exposé

Word is out. On Thursday afternoon, The New York Times released an exposé with five women recalling their experiences being sexually harassed by the comedian. Beforehand, the New York City premiere of his upcoming film, "I Love You, Daddy," was cancelled, in case the report was "damaging." And that it was. Now, distributor The Orchard is reconsidering releasing the film - which apparently alludes to sexual assault allegations against C.K. and for some reason, Woody Allen - writing in a statement that they are "giving careful consideration to the timing and release of the film."

Stories of C.K.'s harassment had been humming about for years, with Gawker being one of the first news sites to investigate what some people are calling one of Hollywood's worst-kept secrets. Naturally, people took to Twitter in droves to express their distaste with the "Louie" star. See their reactions below.

Louis CK? A creep? You mean the man women have been saying is creepy for a while but ya mcm continued to stan regardless? Quelle surprise

@JessicaValenti
Louis CK's manager tried to silence the women he abused. I hope the other comics that Dave Becky represents - @KevinHart4real @azizansari Amy Poehler - will say something.

@HackettKate
Every woman in the comedy world has known for YEARS what Louis CK's deal is. Unforeseen my foot.

Maria Bamford and Fred Melamed star in the Netflix comedy, which returns for a second season Nov. 10. NETFLIX

'Lady Dynamite' is back, comedy fans

Here's how to laugh your way through a breakdown.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
@MetroNewYork
gregory.wakeman@metro.us

We don't throw around the term "genius" when it comes to Netflix series actors every day here at Metro. So it's with some gravity we announce that Fred Melamed is (still) the funniest person on television and a master in his field.

His performance as Bruce Ben-Bacharach on "Lady Dynamite" proves he is pee-your-pants hilarious, and he's elevated by the work of lead actress — and the show's inspiration — Maria Bamford.

"Usually comedians manufacture a character that's a trade-off of who they are," he says. "But with Maria, it's actually her, and her life as she sees it. I was extremely enamored with the strange combination of things that she is."

For those uninitiated, "Lady Dynamite" follows Bamford's life as a stand-up comedian as she moves back to Los Angeles after spending six months recovering from bipolar disorder. Melamed plays her agent.

"Everyone's aware of Maria's honesty, from her struggles with mental illness to how she navigates the world," shares Melamed. "She's also brilliant. And you couldn't have one without the other. Her sense of humor is extremely, extremely sharp. I put her in the same class with the greatest comedians of all time, Richard Pryor and all that, who use their vulnerability honestly."

The two performers became friends on the set of a quick-to-be-canceled show called "Benched" and realized they had to collaborate again. When Mitchell Hurwitz, the creator of "Arrested Development," got his hands on "Lady Dynamite," Bamford had only one man in mind for the role of her agent. In fact, they didn't audition anyone else.

"We don't shy away from cynicism, dark things," says Melamed. "This show is often about how dark Hollywood is, and how much a pain-in-the-ass and crazy everything is. But Maria maintains a love for life and people. Which doesn't soften anything, but makes for an unusual comedy."

So what should viewers expect?

"The first season followed what happened in Maria's life, where she had this breakdown, and it was tough for her to come back," Melamed says. "But she did; she came to California and got her career again, and developed friendships and relationships — but it was tough going."

"In the second season she gets a television show, winds up meeting someone and getting married, and it's a happy marriage (with lots of compromises and twists, like any marriage). She deals in a sense with all the things she wanted — but you have to be careful what you wish for."

If you're feeling quirky, looking for a dark comedy, and are prepared to LOL, check out "Lady Dynamite." Season 2 drops on Netflix Nov. 10th.

"Three Billboards Outside Ebbing, Missouri"

Director: Martin McDonagh
Stars: Frances McDormand, Sam Rockwell, Woody Harrelson

With his first two feature films ("In Bruges" and "Seven Psychopaths") Martin McDonagh mixed violence and comedy in such a hypnotic, grounded and witty manner that audiences couldn't help but be entranced by their swagger. "Three Billboards Outside Ebbing, Missouri" contains all of the above. But with added pathos and a clear, distinct and original point of view. It's the story of an enraged mother (the hilarious, majestic McDormand) who takes a bold move by taking out ads to shame the town's beloved chief of police (Harrelson) for not solving her daughter's murder. Not your typical Oscars contender (what with the combination of physical violence, sentimentality and laughs), but mark our words — at least one nomination (cough, Best Actress, cough) will be awarded to "Three Billboards." GREGORY WAKEMAN

"Murder on the Orient Express"

Director: Kenneth Branagh
Stars: Kenneth Branagh, Penélope Cruz, Johnny Depp, Willem Dafoe, Judi Dench, Michelle Pfeiffer

Watch this latest iteration of Agatha Christie's seminal murder mystery novel "Murder on the Orient Express" on mute, and we're pretty sure you'll enjoy it as much as if you try and follow the storyline. It's got an all-star cast, is beautifully shot — from the exquisite costumes to the striking scenery and precise cinematography — but the script is shoddy, and even the biggest fan of whodunits will have to stifle a giggle at the outlandish twists and turns served up on board. The final reveal (no spoiler) will yield, at most, a shrug of your shoulders. The real star of the film, if any, is Branagh's sophisticated 'stache. GW

"Daddy's Home 2"

Director: Sean Anders
Stars: Linda Cardellini, Will Ferrell, Mark Wahlberg, Mel Gibson, John Lithgow

● ● ● ● ● ○

"Daddy's Home 2" contains plenty of laughs — sure, there are periods where the film feels aimless, but if you're down for some slapstick and aren't above a cheap joke, you'll giggle your way through. This is a movie that knows roundly what it is, raises those stakes and ratchets up the conflict. The ending even speaks to "A Christmas Carol" while delivering surprising jokes and scenes that are organic and will make you at least chortle at their absurdity. So sit back (with low expectations) and embrace the mediocrity, because "Daddy's Home 2" knows how stupid and decidedly middle-of-the-road it is (and you've got to admit that you, too, can be stupid and middle-of-the-road, movie lover), which is exactly why it delivers. GW

Eliza Coupe is hot for the unabomber

At least, the TV version. The "Future Man" actress talks her Hollywood crushes.

RACHAEL VAUGHAN CLEMMONS
rachael.clemmons@metro.us

If you're familiar with Eliza Coupe — perhaps known best for her stint as Jane Kerkovich-Williams on the short-lived, well loved "Happy Endings," — you know that she's belly achingly funny. You want proof? When I tell her, over the phone, that she's had some sort of role in nearly every comedy series I've watched, she quips, "So you're my demographic. f—king great! I love it."

She's not wrong. The 36-year-old has starred in the likes of everything from "The Mindy Project" to "Casual," but now she has a bigger role coming up in Hulu's "Future

As Tiger, Coupe comes back from the future to recruit savior Josh Futturman (Josh Hutcherson) — but he's not all he's cracked up to be. HULU Man," an action-comedy hybrid series helmed by Seth Rogen and Evan Goldberg. Coupe stars as Tiger, a hard purple-haired, soldier from the future who suffers little to no bulls—t.

But instead of chatting about the new series — out on Hulu on Nov. 14 — Coupe got distracted waxing poetic about "Outlander," comparing Jamie to her husband, and her favorite TV shows. "I guess I forgot to be an asshole actor," she says.

We did, at least, manage to get some talk about Michael Fassbender in with the the delightfully potty mouthed actress.

How are you feeling now that your former obsession Michael Fassbender is off the market?

I ended up meeting Michael Fassbender! We have a mutual friend. The whole time, I was like, "Oh, he's just a normal dude. Of course he is." We were having dinner and I had just started dating the guy who became my husband, and I was super duper in love. So I didn't care. It kind of ruined the whole thing for me. I'm happy somebody tamed him, I guess? I'm saying that like I think he was a wildman but let's just be honest: I know nothing. That started as a Funny or Die series, but you do a lot of dramatic fare too. That's kind of how I am in a day. I go from being super happy to totally depressed to super freaking weird and creepy, creepy happy to totally dark, saying weird s—t that people feel like they need to call a doctor, and then back to super happy again. So it's pretty easy for me to vacillate between drama and comedy.

What kind of shows are you watching right now?
I just jumped on the "Outlander" train. Can we talk about f—king Jamie? My husband is the absolute love of my life. But, then there's Jamie. That guy is so hot.

"Outlander" can be a lot, sexiness wise.
We're just on season two. It's so much. We also just finished watching "Manhunt" with Sam Worthington and Paul Bettany. I'm weirdly attracted to [Bettany] as the unabomber. I don't know what that says about me. It wasn't Sam Worthington — who is f—king gorgeous — getting me all riled up. It's the f—king unabomber.

3 Things to watch for as the Giants visit winless Niners

1 Eli's leash

For some reason, quarterback Eli Manning has been burdened with most of the blame for the Giants' misfiring offense.

It's a cheap move by Giants management considering Manning's completion percentage is better than it's ever been, his interception rate is down, and his quarterback rating is up.

But this team is down-

2 Just run it

If the Giants are really as unhappy with Manning as they make it seem, then wouldn't the logical move be keeping the ball out of his hands?

That would mean running the football — which the Giants seem defiantly hesitant to do — is the logical choice.

Orleans Darkwa continues to make the most of his chances, even if they come few and far between.

He's averaging more than five yards per carry this season but is only averaging 9.6 attempts per game.

That has to change if the Giants want to generate any kind of scoring threat.

3 The end of Ben?

This might be the first time in a while that Giants fans feel confident going into a game.

Then there are others who are preparing for the worst-case scenario of losing to a 0-9 49ers team that the Giants are challenging for the No. 1 overall pick in the 2018 NFL draft.

After allowing 51 points to the Rams, New York is facing a Niners' offense that is one of the worst units in football.

The Niners' 143 points scored this year is ranked 26th in the league.

On top of that, their defense has allowed the second-most points.

If the Giants lay another egg, this could finally be the week in which head coach Ben McAdoo is canned.

JOE PANTORNO

Eli Manning paying no mind to rumors

Eli Manning will be the New York Giants quarterback on Sunday against the San Francisco 49ers. It should be that way not just for this weekend but for the rest of the year, even as this team sits with a 1-7 record and an eye towards another rebuilding year.

His numbers don't point to a player who is at fault or deserves a benching.

While 2017 has not been a tremendous year, he is by no means the problem or even one of the major issues for a Giants offense that has barely shown a pulse. Pin the blame on Manning's offensive line or the lack of a running game or the play calling, which has done very little to support him.

Or even the fact that his top two wide receivers are out for the rest of the year.

But while Manning isn't blameless, he isn't the reason why the Giants are No. 29 in total offense, and there's no reason he should be benched. Head coach Ben McAdoo said as much this week and Manning, to his credit, is drowning out all the distractions.

"I want to play. That's what I like to do," Manning said on Tuesday. "I like to play football and play quarterback and I take — I understand that I got a job to do and I got to do it better and do it well and get wins, and if you don't, everybody's job is up for grabs in this league."

And while the Giants are certainly closer to the post-Manning era than the beginning, now is not the time to become fully invested in moving on from their two-time Super Bowl MVP.

Manning's under contract until next year, meaning that the Giants don't need to rush this year to find a replacement. And while everyone is champing at the bit to see draft pick Davis Webb, starting the rookie may not be ideal.

This is still Manning's team and remarkably there is still a window for the Giants next year (and potentially 2019) to maximize the talent of the best quarterback in franchise history. The time isn't there to move on from a quarterback who has thrown for over 4,000 yards in each of the past three seasons.

So for now, Manning sticks to being who he is: unflappable and yet always prepared. Frustration, he says, doesn't factor into his mind-set.

"That doesn't fix anything. That's not going to help us win the next game," Manning said. "So, I got to just keep preparing and working and keep getting some young guys up to speed and have confidence in them and knowing that we can go win this next game."

3 Things to watch as Jets look to get back to .500 vs. Bucs

1 Mo playing hurt

Jets defensive lineman Muhammad Wilkerson is banged up, to say the least. Already playing with a sprained AC joint in his shoulder, it was disclosed that Wilkerson has been playing with a broken pinky toe since Oct. 8. That could explain his inconsistent play, but he's coming around as of late. In his last two games, Wilkerson has two sacks and eight tackles, two of them for losses. Add that with bringing plenty of pressure and Wilkerson is playing like a man possessed. It looks like he's bought into Bowles' system.

2 ASJ's revenge?

Tight end Austin Seferian-Jenkins did not have a very good two-plus-year run with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. Drafted in the second round in 2014, Seferian-Jenkins never met his potential while butting heads with management throughout the process. Now as a Jet, he is on pace to blow the doors off his best season in the league as he already has a career-high 33 receptions for 221 yards and three touchdowns.

3 Hello, old friend

Due to Jameis Winston's injury, the Buccaneers will roll out Ryan Fitzpatrick as their starting quarterback against his former team, the Jets. Fitzpatrick spent two seasons in New York where he experienced the highest of highs and lowest of lows. After setting a franchise record with 31 touchdown passes, Fitzpatrick and the Jets fell flat in 2016, which began with him holding out during contract negotiations. He's appeared in three games with the Buccaneers this season, throwing four touchdowns and two interceptions. JOE PANTORNO

Todd Bowles making case for Coach of the Year

The NFL is at the midway point of a very topsy-turvy campaign, which means top-flight teams, players, and coaches are beginning to separate themselves from the rest of the pack.

And while New York Jets head coach Todd Bowles likely won't win Coach of the Year, he does deserve praise for doing what no one thought possible — keeping Gang Green competitive.

The fact Gang Green (4-5) is even still in contention this late in the season and have had some highly competitive games against both of last season's Super Bowl participants shows the kind of progress Bowles has made.

The commencement of this campaign had a few storylines that most respected pundits predicted — including one that said the season would be an abject failure.

Many even went as far as to predict that Bowles would be dismissed sometime next offseason. And, honestly, such expectations should've been the consensus, considering general manager

Todd Bowles GETTY IMAGES

Mike Maccagnan purged the roster of the team's high-priced and over-used veteran talent.

It's Maccagnan's vision, but it's been up to Bowles to execute said vision, and he's done just that.

Coming off their 34-21 win over the Buffalo Bills (5-3) in a game that wasn't as close as the final score indicated, the Jets are still in contention for a Wild Card playoff spot.

It's easy for young guys to buy into a coach's program and philosophy, but when veterans — some who have been hardened by losing and can become jaded — buy in, that says a lot about the coach.

"He told us what type of year this was going to be [and] he told us what we needed to do to be successful," said right tackle Kelvin Beachum. "He made us believe all year. He's told us what we needed to do to be successful and win ... We didn't know how, we didn't know when, we didn't where, but these guys are determined, hungry, and understand the task at hand. Coach Bowles has instilled that type of mindset into this team."

Second-year linebacker Jordan Jenkins bought in immediately.

"We proved that we're some fighters [and] we can be dominant if we want to," boasted Jenkins.

That's a bold statement, but par for the course within the Jets' locker room.

The Jets are surely not a Super Bowl contender just yet, and maybe not even a playoff team this season, but they're at least way ahead of schedule and are beginning to look like a real team — and that's mostly due to its head coach, who was once persona non grata here in the Tri-State area.

Aries Learning and communicating are highlighted. Use your experience to help deal with uncertainty or problems that crop up with important partnerships.

Taurus Partnership difficulties will surface if you or someone else has neglected to take care of responsibilities. Broach the subject openly to avoid future problems.

Gemini Keep your personal and professional lives separate. An emotional matter should be dealt with responsibly. Don't give someone the wrong impression.

Cancer Attend an event that will educate you about an issue that concerns you. Find out what you can do to make a difference and help bring about important change.

Leo You'll have an emotional confrontation if you don't pay enough attention to how you treat others. Listen to what people say, and respond with honesty and integrity.

Virgo Don't get involved in other people's dilemmas. Get the information and help you need to take care of matters that can affect your reputation or status.

Libra Do something that will make you feel proud and good about who you are and what you have accomplished. Helping others may be thankless at times, but it's also gratifying.

Scorpio Stay on top of your spending habits. It will be easy to miscalculate the cost of a project or purchase. Look for hidden costs before you engage in expensive projects.

Sagittarius Maneuver your way through sensitive situations using wit and charm. Being supportive and a good listener will help you avoid criticism or accusations of meddling.

Capricorn A joint venture should be looked at closely before you decide to get involved. What you are told may not be factual and should be assessed accordingly.

Aquarius Partnerships will suffer if you let your emotions take control. Try to remain patient and look for answers and solutions. Offer intelligence instead of anger.

Pisces Consider what you can do to complement your vocational qualifications. Upgrading your résumé will put you in a good position to negotiate a contract. EUGENIA LAST
